REFUSED TO BE BUNCOED.

Queer, isn't it, that Senator Allison should object to being held responsible for the acceptance of provisions in the railroad rate bill, although President Roosevelt assured the newspaper men that the bill as he had fixed it up with Aldrich, Knox, et al., was entirely satisfactory and exactly what he had wanted all the time.

Instead of being de-lighted with the compromise, Senator Allison got out of bed long enough on Monday to say he had been treated unfairly by the Roosevelt-Aldrich combination which represented him as the author of their "compromise." Not only was he wrothy, but he proceeded to punch holes in the so-called compromise with the result that the administration was compelled to accept Democratic amendments to the presidential bill and agree to restrictions not contemplated by the president and his new-found friends.

As it stands now, the railroad rate bill is expected to pass the senate with these Democratic provisions: No order of the interstate commerce commission is to be suspended by an interlocking decree without a hearing after at least five days' notice and then only when two judges of the court concur in the order or decree. An appeal from the interlocking order or decree may be taken within thirty days but only to the supreme court of the United States; and the rate-making section of the bill shall not be amended.

Obviously, the president did not represent honestly the opinion of Senator Allison and other friends of the rate measure when he announced with much unctious that it was entirely satisfactory as he left it on Saturday. Cocksure, as usual, he apparently took it for granted his party senators would stand for anything he chose to give them; and he attempted to bunco the public into the belief that the Hepburn bill, with his amendment, was all he had ever expected or asked. The sudden reversal of conditions following his announcement is sufficient evidence that the friends of the bill did not believe the president would not accept his assurance at its face value, and were determined to override him, even if they did have to accept help from the Democratic side.

In essence, the action of the conferees Tuesday, who agreed to accept additional amendments, is another blow to Roosevelt's prestige and a reflection on his sincerity. When staunch, old-line Republicans like Allison, balk at the Roosevelt programme and agree to Democratic doctrine, the only inference is that the president has forgotten his windy talk about the "square deal" and has attempted what is commonly known as the "double-cross" for his followers.

If the rate bill passes at all, it will be due to the votes of Democratic senators who got it out of committee in spite of Aldrich; and if it passes in form to be of any value, it will be entirely due to those Democrats who refused to accept Roosevelt's glib declaration that his compromise was a most satisfactory measure, calculated to meet the public demand and to relieve all the injustice of which the country at large had complained.

PRO BONO MORAN.

A month ago bids were opened for new street paving. The Barber Asphalt company was the lowest bidder by about $20,000, but the contract has not been let yet. Normally the "American" council is holding up the contract to secure a settlement of a suit the Barber company has brought against the city to recover $7,000, withheld by the city for delay on a previous contract; actually the award is being postponed for the benefit of P. J. Moran, the highest bidder and the favorite of the "American" party.

To begin with the old suit should cut no figure in this contract. If the Barber company is entitled to the money involved, the city will pay so. And if the city loses it will still be over $10,000 ahead on the proposition. If the Barber people are allowed to carry out their contract on the terms of the bid. Besides, it is a curious freak, a sudden development to demand such a suit when Moran, the competing contractor, has repeatedly delayed on contracts but has always been paid in full without forfeiture for his delay.

The point now is that the city opened bids, found the Barber company the lowest but refuses to execute the contract solely to give Moran a chance to "get in," either on the city or on the successful bidder. It is even rumored that the "Americans" in the council propose to reject the bids and advertise anew to save the job for Moran if it can find no other way to favor him. Truly, this is a great "reform" administration with its $75,000 donation to Moran on the conduit, and its contemplated donation of another little sum, say $20,000, to the same contractor on a paving job.

Speaking of "reform," the public ought to watch the proposed sale of city real estate by the "American" administration. When Thompson was mayor before he sold nearly $150,000 of city real estate. Of this sum about $35,000 went for a city jail; the balance of over $100,000 went to pay useless salaries and other extravagant costs of the Thompson administration. With this precedent before him, and facing a heavy deficit in the funds this year, Thompson is planning to sell some more real estate and sequester it for salaries and heelers' benefices.

Very little really remains of the city's once magnificent estate, but that little should be guarded and saved. Parks should be made of some of it, all of it should be kept intact and the "Americans" compelled to make good their deficit by a legitimate tax levy which would show exactly what they are spending. The time for a new tax levy is not far away; let the "Americans" face it like men and take the results.

PHELAN'S PLAN BAD.

Comment on ex-Mayor Phelan's plan to secure government aid in the rebuilding of San Francisco is almost unanimously adverse. Mr. Phelan proposes a bond issue of $200,000,000 by the city of San Francisco, the government to guarantee their payment. The purpose of the government guarantee is to secure a lower rate of interest than the money could be secured for on the credit of San Francisco. That this effect would be arrived at there is no doubt but the unwisdom of loaning the government's credit to an individual city for any purpose, in any emergency, is being generally pointed out.

The government, as in duty bound, has contributed liberally toward relieving the distress of the people of the ruined city. It has sent them thousands of tons of food, medical supplies and other essentials. No objection could possibly be raised to this action. And no objection could be raised to further action along this line by the national government. It is a different proposition, though, this proposition to rebuild the city on government credit. The precedent would be an extremely dangerous one.

It is greatly to be hoped that no other occasion of even approximately the magnitude of the one under consideration will ever arise in the United States. Certainly none is likely to arise. But there will be disasters of less magnitude, and the people in the vicinity where they occur will ask that the government's credit be loaned to them. They will ask with some show of right, too, for they will point out that aid was extended to San Francisco. No, the Phelan plan will not do.

The people of San Francisco will find means with which to rebuild their city. The property loss is estimated at all the way from $200,000,000 to $350,000,000. Taking the larger figure as the basis of calculation the case of San Francisco is by no means hopeless. First will come the insurance money, estimated at a total of $175,000,000. Here we have half of the property loss taken care of at once, making due allowance for damage done by the earthquake.

For the rest the moneyed men of the country will be responsible. Investments in San Francisco will be as safe as investments anywhere and the capitalists will not hesitate about putting their money in. San Francisco will be restored without government credit behind her. Her own credit is sufficient to her needs, great though they are.

A New York man found his own two-year-old child wandering around the street and took it to a police station, never realizing that the child was his own. Now if that had happened in Utah the paragraphs would have talked about it for months.

We judge from the announcement that several Utah citizens have been granted pensions that Representative Howell has been committing some "untiring efforts." Also that he will be a candidate to succeed himself.

Richmond Pearson Hobson is being boomed as a presidential candidate, which leads an eastern contemporary to remark that it was never before so impressed with the idea that this is a free country.

Senator Allison denies that he is responsible for the rate bill compromise for which the president gave him credit. Is Roosevelt something in addition to being a four flusher?

However, if the new grand jury gets dangerously near to an indictment of life insurance grafters Mr. Jerome will be right there to advise them not to do it.

We had been thinking that a worse appointment than Booth as district attorney could hardly be made, but we hadn't thought of Livingston.

If President Roosevelt were only a tithe as great in deed as he is in words he would be the greatest man the world has ever known.

Still, if the painters and paperhangers do strike a lot of men will have a good excuse for not refunding their houses.

SOCIETY

Mrs. Oscar L. Cox entertained a dozen friends yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Mary H. Talbot and her guest, Miss Anna Finley of Portland, Ore.
